Part II Reading Comprehension (50 points) Section A

Directions: There are four passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You should decide on the best choice and blacken the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a pencil. Questions 21 to 25 are based on the following passage: It's now the season for senior college students to return to their campuses after all their hard and exciting days of being teachers, doctors, journalists and technicians during their internships. In the United States many colleges adopt an internship system to enable students to undergo on-the-job training at companies and other places of work before graduation. Students favor this system because it helps in the choice of their future careers. In fact, the internship system has advantage for both students and entrepreneurs (企业家). the students are awarded academic credits when they have gone through several months of study at college, and the employers have the opportunity for easier access to the human resources they need. American colleges are putting a great deal of effort into publicizing the list of businesses that have accepted their students for internships. The big three TV networks and some leading hotel chains are reportedly very popular, in particular with students from foreign countries. People involved with higher education in America support the internship system and stress that among other things, it enables colleges to serve as a practical link with society for students who want to get a brief but practical glimpse of what the working world is really like. In Japan, on the other hand, it is only recently that some universities have introduced an internship system. Keiji Onose, a Hosei University professor of economics, says that his university has started initiating a similar system on a trial basis. Particularly, he is concerned about the currently prevailing situation in which new graduates tend to quit their hard-won jobs quite casually even though employment remains an urgent problem for students in general. "Given this, the internship is definitely worth a try from the standpoint of enabling students to take a clear look at the realities of social life and realize the need to choose their most fitting career," Onose pointed out. 21. "The internship system" means _____. A) the colleges help students seek fitful jobs B) the employers get cheap human resources C) college students are given academic credits when at school D) college students take practical training at some working places before graduation 22.
