The overwhelming majority of college graduates are confronting the ever-tougher job market. Most of them struggle to land a job in big cities like Beijing and Shanghai. So these priority areas draw a host of job candidates every year. Regardless of where to start their careers, some individuals give the priority to the anticipated well-paid positions. Gender differences in the job application are striking. To avoid labor-intensive jobs, girls focus their attention on financial and service sectors. Some of them find employment in schools. Boys always push hard to find a managerial or technical job. Everyone expects to embark on a promising career to demonstrate his/her skills and capabilities. But position isn't tailored to every applicant. So college graduates must lower the over-high expectations and apply for proper jobs. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
