A travelling -1- of actors had arrived, and it was -2- that they would give their first -3- that -4- night. The play would be given in a stable, one that was large enough to -5- about a hundred people. -6- one end of it a stage had -7- been erected. -8- was -9- by 4 lamps, and a curtain was being hastily fixed -10-, with two boys to -11- it -12- and forwards. -13- 7 o'clock every seat was -14-. -15- who were not lucky enough to get a -16- on a bench stood at the back, while -17- others crowded outside the open door, hoping at least to hear the story. There were only 3 actors, a man, a woman and a boy. At a quarter past 7, the stage manager, who was also the -18- actor, after poking his head several times round the corner of the curtain, decided that the impatient audience -19- be kept waiting -20- longer, so the play began.
