A whopping 67 percent replied “ big government ” Opinion researchers rarely see such a vast change in public attitude. When put in historical perspective , from the time of Franklin Roosevelt ' s New Deal to the present , the fallen status of government as a protector and benefactor is extraordinary. We ' ve returned to the instinctive American wariness of Washington so common before the Great Depression. In our poll , taken before the November elections , the overwhelming majority of our respondents wanted to stop or roll back the impact of government. In answer to another question posed by The Digest , 79 percent said they wanted either no more than the current level of government services and taxes , or less government and lower taxes. “ It seems to me that we in the middle class bear most of the burden , ” says Jone Nell Norman , 61 , a nurse in Dyersburg , Tenn. , who often wonders about the government ' s judgement in spending her money. Of Americans in our sample , 62 percent believe that politician ' s ethics and honesty have fallen. And what about Congress ? Is it doing a good job ? Or do members “ spend more time thinking about their political futures than passing good legislation ? ” Across generations , a thumping

89 percent thought the latter. “ Congress always seems to be screwing up , ” says one young Xer. However , Americans are satisfied with their own lives and jobs. Four of five respondents were “ completely ” or “ somewhat ” satisfied. The figures held up across all ages including Xer , whom many pundits have claimed are pessimistic about their future.来源 : www.examda.com Looking deeper at jobs , we found 70 percent of Americans believe they are about where they should be , given their talents and effort. This is an issue where age always makes a difference , since older people , who are more established in their jobs tend to be more satisfied , while younger workers are still trying to find the right niche. Sure enough , Xers scored 65 percent , about five points below average.
