During times when the cost of living is rapidly becoming greater, stocks are usually a better investment than bonds. This is because they pay a much higher interest rate than bonds under these conditions. When economic conditions are not good, bonds are generally a better investment. This is because the interest paid on bonds is fixed at a certain rate when they are issued and does not change. Because of the relationship between the economy and the performance of stocks and bonds, when people are not sure about economic conditions, they may hesitate before buying anything. They prefer to wait and see what happens to the prices and rates of interest of stocks and bonds before investing their money. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
