An earthquake 125 miles off the coast of the Indonesian island Sumatra triggered tsunami warnings. Indonesia , Sri Lanka , Thailand and India issued tsunami warnings , but fears of a tsunami seemed to subside after around three hours and they were scaled down. The earthquake struck at 16 : 09 GMT at a magnitude of 8.7. This was 11 : 09pm local time. There were reports of many deaths in the Indonesian island of Nias , south of the earthquakes epicentre. Tourism in the region is likely to be affected whether or not the earthquake leads to tsunamis. “ As a direct result of the ( Boxing Day ) tsunami there is a risk that 9% of international travellers planning a holiday in 2005 have switched their travel plans to other regions , ” says a report published earlier this month. The “ Post-Tsunami global travel intentions ” report , commissioned by the intergovernmental World Tourism Organisation ( WTO ) , highlights how those worst affected by the tsunami have also been the ones hit by the sharpest falls in visitor numbers. “ Since the tsunami disaster , there has been a significant drop in international travel to affected tourist destinations such as Phuket in Thailand , Sri Lanka and the Maldives , ” says James Murray , executive with Visa International Asia Pacific , which co-authored the report.
