The Dying Languages Today , more people than ever before are speaking to each other through satellite television , cellular telephones and computers. This means that people from different parts of the world need to be able to communicate in the same language. That language happens to be English. Because of this , experts have predicted that more than half of the worlds 6 , 000 languages may die out in the next century. Already almost all Californian Native American languages are in danger of extinction. They are being swallowed up by English and other language. It is a pity , but that is one of the prices of modernization. 100Test 下载频道开通 , 各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
