Questions 1322 Section One. Questions 1317 Question13 Joe, I've got Mr Brand on the line and he says he hasn't got the cheque for his trip yet. Apparently he had to pay the hotel in cash and it was quite a lot of money. Do you know if his form has been processed yet? Question14 We are going to start the campaign by putting full page ads in all the major newspapers over a period of a month. They'll be in weekly, probably on a Monday, and after that we are planning to focus on TV and Radio. Question15 Woman: Mr Carpenter has decided to postpone it until after the next consignment has gone out. I shall fax everyone who was due to come and give them some alternative dates. Question16 I shall be coming round to each of you to discuss how you think things have gone so far. I'm going to need as much detail as possible because I want the documentation to be a realistic record of events. Question17 It's very sophisticated model. You can programme it to send stuff at any time and then if there's a problem a message appears on this little screen here. It even suggests what you can do about it to put it right! Section Two. Questions 1822 Question18 Well in a sense I've got no choice in the matter. No one's actually told me to get the qualification. It's just that from my point of view, my own sense of confidence, if you like, I feel that if I'm going to be responsible for instructing other people in the company, then I should do something to improve my own level of knowledge. On the other hand, I don't know what I feel about the course itself. One thing is for sure, I am not looking forward to the journey there and back every day. It's going to be very tiring. Mind you, I know I shouldn't complain. It's only for a month after all.

Question 19 It's certainly a challenge, isn't it? Of course I am nervous in some ways. Who wouldn't be? Then again there's a lot to look forward to as well. For starters, it's going to be something like twenty people doing it. So I'm sure that's going to include some interesting types, you know, people you enjoy spending time with on the course itself and also afterwards. Could be some useful contacts, too. Well, OK. I need the course. If I don't it, I won't be able to cope with all the latest equipment. I mean, these days, you have to swim fast to stay afloat, don't you? But still I don't see why it can't be enjoyable at the same time.

Question 20 What I mainly feel, really, is nervous. You know, like I am being sent back to school or something. I am feeling very lacking in confidence, which is of course not the best starting position. After all these years of doing the job, and doing it well, I'm proud to say, and picking it up as I've gone along. It seems embarrassing to be told to go get a piece of paper, to have to have a certificate, especially when you feel you know what you're doing. Yes, of course, I do realize there'll be things on the course I haven't done before. And that concerns me too. Because I don't know how well I'll retain it all, if I'll be able to recall it afterwards. Oh, perhaps it will all be OK in the end, I certainly hope so.

Question 21 Yes, the course content does look good in the brochure. I know in a sense I shouldn't complain. After all it ' s a chance to enhance my skills and knowledge. And thats welcome at times. But it ' s still a bit of gamble, isnt? I just have to hope it really does improve my chances of hanging on to my job here. It ' s a bit frightening, to tell you the truth, with so many people having to go. After 20 years in a company, you dont want to think about being out of work, do you? But I really wish the brochure would tell you more. It looks good, as I said, but there ' s no detail, nothing on the time or the teachers. So I feel bit in the dark really.

Question22 At this age, youve just got to want to get ahead and do whatever it takes to be ahead of the test. That ' s what drives me anyway. I just cant wait to get started. Ever since I first saw the notice up on the board, I knew it was for me. I do appreciate it ' s a bit far away. Yes, and I am a little hazy on some of detail or what the other people will be like. But those are small things, unimportant points to my mind. Its certainly not cheap. Not by anyone ' s standards. But you get what you pay for, dont you? I am really confident that I ' ll be enjoying the benefits of it for years to come. So Im sure it represents good value for money and time.
