For people should have some basic idea of how the things that they use do what they do. Further, students might be helped by a course that considers the computers impact on society. But that is not what is meant by computer literacy. For computer literacy is not a form of literacy (读写能力). it is a trade skill that should not be taught as a liberal art. Learning how to use a computer and learning how to program one are two distinct activities. A case might be made that the competent citizens of tomorrow should free themselves from their fear of computers. But this is quite different from saying that all ought to know how to program one. Leave that to people who have chosen programming as a career. While programming can be lots of fun, and while our society needs some people who are experts at it, the same is true of auto repair and violinmaking.来源：www.examda.com Learning how to use a computer is not that difficult, and it gets easier all the time as programs become more "user-friendly". Let us assume that in the future everyone is going to have to know how to use a computer to be a competent citizen. What does the phrase "learning to use a computer" mean? It sounds like "learning to drive a car", that is, it sounds as if there is some set of definite skills that, once acquired, enable one to use a computer. In fact, "learning to use a computer" is much more like "learning to play a game", but learning the rules of one game may not help you play a second game, whose rules may not be the same. There is no such a thing as teaching someone how to use a computer. One can only teach people to use this or that program and generally that is easily accomplished.¹ To be the competent citizens of tomorrow, people should _____. A) try to lay a solid foundation in computer science B) be aware of how the things that they use do what they do C) learn to use a computer by acquiring a certain set of skills D) understand that programming a computer is more essential than repairing a car². In the second paragraph "violin-making" is mentioned to show that _____ A) programming a computer is as interesting as making a violin B) our society needs experts in different fields C) violin making requires as much skill as computer programming D) people who can use a computer don't necessarily have to know computer programming 来源 : www.examda.com³ Learning to use a computer is getting easier all the time because _____. A) programs are becoming less complicated B) programs are designed to be convenient to users C) programming is becoming easier and easier D) programs are becoming readily available to computer users⁴ According to the author, the phrase "learning to use a computer" (LineS3,4, Para.3) means learning _____.
