Choose the one that you think is the correct answer. Mark your choices on your ANSWER SHEET.

TEXT A There is controversy and misunderstanding about the proper functions of juvenile courts and their probation departments. There are cries that the whole process produces delinquents rather than rehabilitates them. There are speeches by the score about “ getting enough ” with the kids. Another large group thinks we should be more understanding and gentle with delinquents. This distrust of the services offered can be attributed in large part to the confusion in the use of these services throughout the country. On the one hand, the juvenile courts are tied to the criminal court system, with an obligation to decide guilt and innocence for offenses specifically stated and formally charged. On the other, they have the obligation to provide treatment, supervision and guidance to youngsters in trouble, without respect to the crimes of which they are accused. These two conflicting assignments must be carried out quite properly in an informal, private way, which will not stigmatize a youngster during his formative years. And, as the courts’ preoccupation with the latter task has increased, the former (that of dispensing justice) has retreated, with the result grave injustices are bound to occur. 66. The title below that best expresses the ideas of this passage is ____.

TEXT B

Violin prodigies, I learned, have come in distinct waves from distinct regions. Most of the great performers of the late 19th and early 20th centuries were born and brought up in Russia and Eastern Europe. I asked Isaac Stern, one of the world ' s greatest violinists, the reason for this phenomenon. " It is very clear, " he told me. " They were all Jews and Jews at the time were severely oppressed and ill-treated in that part of the world. They were not allowed into the professional fields, but they were allowed to achieve excellence on a concert stage. " As a result, every Jewish parent ' s dream was to have a child in the music school because it was a passport to the West.

Another element in the emergence of prodigies, I found, is a society that values excellence in a certain field and is able to nurture talent. Nowadays, the most nurturing societies seem to be in the Far East. “ In Japan, a most competitive society with stronger discipline than ours, ” says Isaac Stern, “ children are ready to test their limits every day in many fields, including music. When Western music came to Japan after World War II, that music not only became part of their daily lives, but it became a discipline as well. ” The Korean and Chinese, as we know, are just as highly motivated as the Japanese. That ’ s a good thing, because even prodigies must work hard. Next to hard work, biological inheritance plays an important role in the making of a prodigy. J.S. Bach, for example, was the top of the several generations of musicians, and four of his sons had significant careers in music.⁷⁰ Jewish parents in Eastern Europe longed their children to attend music school because _____.A.it would allow them access to a better life in the WestB.Jewish children are born with excellent musical talentC.they wanted their children to enter into the professional fieldsD.it would enable the family to get better treatment in their own country⁷¹. Nurturing societies as mentioned in the passage refer to societies that _____.A. enforce strong discipline on students who want to achieve excellenceB. treasure talent and provide opportunities for its full developmentC. encourage people to compete with each otherD. promise talented children high positions⁷². Japan is described in the passage as a country that attaches importance to _____.A. all-round developmentB. the learning of Western musicC. strict training of children D. variety in academic studies⁷³. Which of the following titles best summarizes the main idea of the passage?A. Jewish Contribution to Music.B. Training of Musicians in the World.C.
