Competition is common in every field of life. For example, the Olympic Games is the most famous competition in the world. In the four-hundred meter swimming race, the swimmers plunge into the water at the signal. Each swings his or her arms and legs and tries his or her best to be the first. Also there is the competition for jobs, for promotion, for customers, and so on. We can say, in a certain sense, competition stimulates people's interest in work and helps society to go forward. We often find that competition goes hand in hand with cooperation. Competition and cooperation are compatible. Imagine that if you want to win a football game? your team must exert all your efforts to compete with the other team while each member of your team is cooperation with the others. Both are equally important. While we advocate competition, we cannot forget cooperation. Human beings are social beings. Now one can exist alone in the society. If you want to play the game well, you have to play with others. You cannot play single-handed and win. You have to cooperate with your playmates, who may make the social ladder for you to climb to the top. From cooperation we get mutual help and understanding. With cooperation the world is progressing at peace and in harmony. Yours sincerely 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
