For Questions 41-45 , choose the most suitable one from the list A-G to fit into each of the numbered blanks. There are two extra choices , which do not fit in any of the blanks. Mark your answers on ANSWER SHEET 1. (10 points) Here I want to try to give you an answer to the question : What personal qualities are desirable in a teacher ? Probably no two people would draw up exactly the same lists. But I think the following would be generally accepted. First , 41) But it does rule out such types as the overexcitable , melancholy , frigid , sarcastic , cynical , frustrated , and overbearing : I would say too , that it excludes all of dull or purely negative personality. Secondly , 42) Closely related with this is the capacity to be tolerant-not , indeed , of what is wrong , but of the frailty and immaturity of human nature which induce people , and again especially children , to make mistakes. Thirdly , 43) This does not mean being a saint. It means that he will be aware of his intellectual strengths , and limitations , and will have thought about and decided upon the moral principles by which his life shall be guided. There is no contradiction in my going on to say that a teacher should be a bit of an actor. That is part of the technique of teaching , which demands that every now and then a teacher should be able to put on an act to enliven a lesson , correct a fault , or award praise. Children , especially young children , live in a world that is rather larger than life. On the other hand , 44) He must be pretty resilient , teaching makes great demands on nervous energy. And he should be able to take in his stride the innumerable petty irritations any adult dealing with children has to endure. Finally , 45) There are three principle objects of study : the subject , or subjects , which the teacher is teaching ; the methods by which they can best be taught to the particular pupils in the classes he is teaching ; and - by far the most important-the children , young people , or adults to whom they are to be taught. The cardinal principle of British education is education of the whole person , and that it is best acquired through full and active co-operation between two persons , the teacher and the learner. [A] it is not merely desirable but essential for a teacher to have a genuine capacity for sympathy in the literal meaning of that word ; a capacity to tune in to the minds and feelings of other people. [B] a teacher must be capable of infinite patience. This , I may say , is largely a matter of selfdiscipline and self-training , because none of us were born like that. [C] the teachers personality should be pleasantly live and attractive. This does not rule out people who are physically plain , or even ugly , because many such have great personal charm. [D] A teacher must remain mentally alert , He must be quick to adapt himself to any situation , however improbable (they happen !) and able to improvise , if necessary at less than a moments notice [E] A teacher should be humorous sometimes like a best friend sitting down across from you in your living room having a chat about what's going on in your life. [F] I think a teacher should have the kind of mind , which always wants to go on learning. Teaching is a job at which one will never be perfect ; there is always something more to learn about it. [G] I hold it essential for a teacher to be both intellectually and morally honest.
