At the same time, inflation will climb slowly, registering 1.3 percent in the first six months of the year and 1.7 percent for the 12 months, according to the report, from the Peoples Bank of Chinas research bureau. Chinas economy will grow by 10.3 percent in the first half of 2006, then slow marginally for a full-year expansion of 10 percent, the central bank said in a new report. The forecasts, released over the weekend and published in the Beijing Morning Post on Monday, come despite a stream of government measures aimed at slowing the economy, following growth of 10.3 percent in the first quarter. Chinas economy has showed few signs of responding to the cooling measures, such as an interest rate hike in April and policies targeted at curbing investment in the property sector. China is the worlds fastest growing major economy, with expansion fueled mainly by investment and exports. It grew 9.9 percent in 2005. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
