The following is my idea of family planning. First. we must urge our health authorities to find ways to instruct our compatriots in birth control and let them understand the benefit of family planning. Second, we must develop effective contraceptives suited for our people. As we know, birth rates in the West are lower than ours and that is because the Westerners birth control techniques are much more advanced and have little side effects and they like to use them. Third, we must urge our government to establish laws governing family planning and penalize those who break any of such laws. These laws, however, should not be draconian and the steps taken to enforce them must be gradual as we are not in a totalitarian Communist state. 第六篇：Family planning, which can be roughly defined as a way to prevent any undue population increase, is actually one of the various population policies. As Mal thus saw it, population always increases faster than food production and if this tendency remains unchecked the world starvation, disease, crime and a host of other disasters. Of course nobody would like to see the coming of such a day. The population of Taiwan, considering the land area of the island, is disproportionately large. Although we boast of an impressive GNP as a result of our economic achievement, the populousness is still a potential crisis for our society. So it is important that we push ahead with our family planning program to lower the birth rate or encourage people to emigrate. Family planning is also good for the family itself. In a small family the parents can take better care of their children and have more money set aside for the education of them. We must therefore accept the idea of family planning if we hope to enjoy a higher standard of living.

第七篇：As statistically reported by the United Nations the world population is ever on the increase and the population density of Taiwan is second only to that of the Netherlands. The pressure of population is felt everywhere on this island particularly in the street of a big city where the snarled traffic is a common sight. The Chinese family tradition that sees the production of many offspring as a sort of bliss is obviously the root of all the trouble we have had. Blinded by this tradition many people simply fail to see the seriousness of such problems as health care, food production and educational opportunities or the seriousness of such social ills as juvenile delinquency, broken families and divorce. Our government is however keenly aware of such serious problems and has therefore gone all lengths to promote family planning. The purpose is to control the population in terms of both quantity and quality. Frankly speaking to create a stable and prosperous society is the ultimate goal of family planning. All in all we should subscribe to this program.

第八篇：To give birth to children and raise them was difficult in the past and this was largely the result of the inadequate medical knowledge and equally inadequate medical facilities in those days. Clearly it was because of this difficulty that families of former times tended to play it safe, producing a lot of offspring so as to guard against any possible loss. Of course, such a thing occurs more frequently in an agricultural society than in an Industrialized one as in an agricultural society extended families are the fashion. Times change. Most of us live now in an industrialized society where overpopulation is seen oftener as a bane than as a boon, and that is also why family planning is now all the rage, particularly in populous countries. Family planning not only can stem the population growth, but can also provide the needed information for those who want to start a family. To make their lives happier and more harmonious, couples should subscribe to this kind of planning, avoiding unnecessary births of putting a limit on the number of their children, as it is, family planning is meant not only to practice birth control, but also to plan childbirth. as it is, family planning is meant not only to practice birth control, but also to plan childbirth. The following is what I think we should do in regard to the promotion of family planning: 1) disseminate information on family planning and persuade people to scrap the traditional thinking that a boy is better than a girl and that having no heir is a shame: 2) regard population problems and the way to build a happy family as apart of the educational course: 3) positively strive for support from government officials and leaders of a consortium: 4) put continuous emphasis on the need to tie up the oviduct or the vas deferens for either sex. In a word, family planning rests with every citizen, not merely with a few persons. 100Test 下载频道开通 , 各类考试题目直接下载。 详
