The Pros and Cons of the Internet   There can be little doubt that the Internet has many advantages   To begin with   the Internet Makes our life more convenient   We can keep in touch with friends through email instead of the traditional post service   Many companies have offered the Ebusiness services by which we can book tickets   buy supper and enjoy the latest record of your beloved pop groups all through the Internet while staying leisurely at home

   Furthermore   the Internet makes our life more colorful   It provides us a new means to get a wide range of knowledge and information   We can also chat with different people   exchanging ideas and making friends in the cyber space   However   the Internet has also brought about many problems .Many people, especially the children   spend most of their time sitting in front of the computers   playing netgames or chatting in the virtual world

   As a result   they neglect their study and work. Besides   when people become too dependent on the Internet   they tend to give up much social communication   which is essential for mental health

   In the long run   this may give rise to more serious social problems.. As far as I am concerned   the Internet opens a window for me to know about the outside world   In spite of its defects   I still believe that it is the Internet that boosts our civilization to an unprecedented height and that it will bring us even more benefits in the future. 100Test