1) You are really something.

NOTE1: something中th的发音特别注意； NOTE2: You are really outstanding. 2) Dont step on her toes. NOTE1: step on这个短语可以连读；

NOTE2: Dont make her angry. 「世博V O A」洗耳恭听，两个句子小菜一碟！

Here is the story. Up to now, I have been teaching here for more than ten years. When my students see me, they would wave to me and say hello. Maybe you think that is the same to every teacher, for the students are taught to respect their teachers. It is, but there is something different here. They like me because we are on good terms, just like close friends and they often say "Tom, you are really something. How can you be such successful and be energetic all the time?" At this time, I would smile at them and say, "I am flattered. One point I'd like to mention is that you should learn how to be friends with people around you. That is to say "Dont step on others toes." By and by, you will probably find that more and more people would be happy to help you when you are in need. Of course, you have to be knowledgeable and capable as well. Then one day, when the opportunity comes, you can make great success." 1)

You are really something. 你真得很了不起。 2) Dont step on her toes. 不要触怒她。 「请你猜猜看」挑战自我，情景抢答也刺激！

Here are three situations: S1. Suppose one day you were asked to go to the managers office. Finally you knew that you got a promotion. What do you think your colleagues would say to you?

S2. When Tom is angry, he would pull a long face. Now Tom is pulling a long face, but Peter is going to make fun of him. What good suggestion can you give to Peter?

S3. It is common that young people would change from one job to another again and again. But now you find someone has been doing the same job for 30 years. Would you like to give him a high compliment?
