Use specific reasons and examples to explain your answer. It is fairly clear that there are some similarities between animals and human beings. Knowing about the adaptation of animals has given to us a lot of benefits. Accordingly a great number of countries began to pay more attention the zoos. In the light of this phenomenon, some people fear that it will cost too much money and land to build up a zoo, furthermore, argue that the zoo has no value to them. Personally, however, I disagree with this point of view. It is my firm belief that a zoo is invaluable to human beings in many aspects. Nowadays, the modern zoo has acted as a research center to study animals. There is a great technological explosion around us, generated by mimicking the animals. For instance, echo-sounding apparatus, more in general use in ships, was based in the principle----measuring the intervals can calculate the length of objects----which is similar to some certain bats. Apparently, the importance of this point view is inevitable. The investments will make the people live better. Another reason that cannot be ignored is that the zoo is one of the most fascinating places for people to relax and enjoy themselves. It can be seen that many groups of families and friends are walking in the zoo, especially after a whole day ' s working and studying, breathing the fresh air and seeing the lovely animals. On the other hand, the zoo has provided a leisurely place for people, such as a couple of lovers, a bunch of good friends, to talk with each other. Needless to say, the zoo has played an essential role in strengthen the emotion belt between people. Moreover, visiting zoos frequently will increase the awareness of protecting animals and nature, which are all crucial to the human being. We should live compatible with animals. Only by this way can we live better in future. Not, after all, that there is any such absolutely perfect thing in the world. It is true that building up a zoo need a great deal of land and money. However, with a suitable planning and the supports of volunteers, I believe the things will turn around. To sum up, the advantages of the zoo are more obvious. With no doubt, the zoo has provided a good place to study animals, relax the muscles, and communicate with others. Therefore, obviously, the value of building up a zoo is undeniable. 100Test 下载频道开通 , 各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
