Groups or organizations are an important part of some peoples lives. Why are groups or organizations important to people? Use specific reasons and examples to explain your answer. Last month, Lisa, a Chinese immigrant in Canada, held a party to celebrate her successful acceptance to the Engineer Association. It is great news for her, because she knows that the membership is a “ passport ” to continue her professional job in the new country. Lisa ’ s experience is just an example of the influence of organizations. Organizations are becoming more and more important in people ’ s lives.

Memberships bring people bright future, offer opportunity to realize their values, and foster their leisure time. To begin with, some organizations set threshold for the specific fields such as medication and care, so the membership is the only way to begin career. Many immigrants who used to be an experienced and trained nurse come to Canada where hospitals lack a large number of nurses or care staff, but they cannot continue their career in this country, since they are not members of the professional association registered nurse association. Becoming a member of this organization is those people ’ s dream. Furthermore, The recognized memberships also speed up people ’ s career. For example, those who are a Chartered Accountant have more opportunities to be promoted or to choose their desired fields than their financial counterparts. Next, the organizations help members realize their values. The purpose of some institutes is to contribute to the society, and these values attract those people who hold the similar values. By campaigning activities and spreading their values to the public, the institutes help their members satisfy values. Save us, a volunteer organization that intends to preserve the extinct animals, gives lectures in the university and government early year since it was founded. In turn, more and more students participate in this activity, and government grants more money into this project. Its members fulfill their value when they are doing their jobs. In addition, some organizations also provide their members with funs. People join some groups because they can share their interest with other members. Soccer, the most popular sport in the world, bring its fans together. These fans can shout or cry to display their emotion during the game, and the groups create the exiting sphere that results from the group effect. People enjoy their leisure time in these kinds of groups. Therefore, organizations play an important role in people ' s lives, not just because of the rights that facilitate members ' career, but also because of the obligation that can satisfy their values and the funs of the participation. The organizations will affect people more in the future. 100Test 下载频道开通 , 各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
