Shenzhen stock exchange to develop cooperation with Indian counterpart Chinas Shenzhen Stock Exchange (SSE) intends to further develop cooperation with the National Stock Exchange of India (NSE), SSE board director Chen Dongzheng said Tuesday. He made the remarks at a ceremony during which he and NSE president Ravi Narain signed a cooperation memorandum between SSE and NSE. Chen said that China and India are the "twin engines" of Asian economic growth. He said that SSE and NSE also have many similarities: both were established at the beginning of the 1990s, both employ electronic technology for trading, and both achieved rapid development in a short period of time. "The signing of the cooperation memorandum is a significant milestone for the two stock exchanges," he said. Also Tuesday, the cooperation memorandum between SSE and the US-based Chicago Board Options Exchange (CBOE) began to take effect. This memorandum lays a foundation for cooperation between the two sides in such fields as options. SSE is a mutualized organization that provides a venue for securities trading under the authorization of the China Securities Regulatory Commission (CSRC).中文：中国的深圳证券交易所发展与印度的合作 深交所理事长陈东征周二发表宣言，中国的深圳证券交易所(SSE)计划进一步加强与印度(NSE)的国家证券交易所的合作。他在就与印度国家证券交易所(NSE)
