Authority to acquire 51 pct stake in Shenzhen Baoan Airport - report Chinas stock markets have great scope for development as the economy maintains rapid growth and the government proceeds with plans to give foreign investors some access to the A-share markets, the China Securities Journal said in a front-page editorial. The article is the second in a series of four editorials on the stock markets, and analysts said the series appears to have been placed in the newspaper by the government with a view to talking up investor confidence. The article said China can expect to achieve GDP growth of more than 7 pct this year, and noted that the countrys exports in the five months to May grew by 13.2 pct from a year earlier, while its actual foreign direct investment grew by 12.4 pct. The countrys foreign currency reserves at end-May amounted to 238.4 bln usd, while personal deposits at financial institutions exceeded 8 trln yuan, it said. It also said many domestic insurance companies need more channels for the investment of their capital, and the stock market will be one channel for this investment. It added that the upcoming 16th Congress of the Communist Party may introduce key ideas and policies regarding the reform and development of the economy. All of these factors show, without a doubt, that there is a good environment for the stable development of the stock market, it said. Allowing listed companies to precede other state enterprises in the establishment of the "modern enterprise system" is a fundamental factor for the development of the stock markets, it added. The reform and opening of the market will bring great opportunities for domestic investors, and will make shares very attractive to overseas investors, it said. The government is currently discussing how to implement a qualified foreign institutional investor system that will give foreign institutions some access to the A-share markets, and as this will bring more capital to the markets it will create new force for their development, it said. The editorial added that it is important to adhere to the Central Committee's formulation of "Development needs new ideas. Reform needs new breakthroughs. Opening needs a new situation". Consequently, it is important to seize this new chance by opening the market and creating a new situation, it said.
