Industries in talks with China cos on potential investments Saudi Basic Industries Corp (SABIC) is in talks with companies in China over potential investments in the mainland, Fahad Al-Swailem vice-president of the companys polyolefins unit, said in a South China Morning Post report. The company hopes to form alliances or co-invest with potential mainland partners on manufacturing as part of its strategy to tap the China market. "We are talking to a number of parties in China and we are optimistic that something will be happening in this area in the future," Al-Swailem said. He declined to give details but added some of the potential partners include major Chinese petrochemical firms. SABIC is interested in setting up a manufacturing presence in China for its ethylene, polyethylene and polypropylene products. Sabic is the worlds third largest polyethylene producer and fourth-largest polypropylene maker
