If the relationship (36) two persons is (37) become friendship, there (38) be understanding.

Unless you can know and comprehend what it is (39) the other person values and seeks, you (40) establish a deep bond between you. There may be admiration, (41) scarcely affection.

Understanding and a (42) of sharing is essential to this. The understanding may not be of strengths (43) but of weaknesses, too.

It is (44) that "a friend is (45) who knows and understands all about us and loves us (46) the same." There must be confidence (47) loyalty. Have you (48) kept a person whom you once thought you might (49) as a friend just as (50) acquaintance because you could not trust her? Perhaps you found her (51) secrets you had given her with many (52). Possibly you overheard some slighting remark she made (53) you or someone else for (54) she had vowed high regard.

In such cases you have been forced to recognize that this person could not be trusted. You could safely offer your friendliness but (

55) friendship. 36.about among between for 37.but with to just 38.must should can may 39.that what which when 40.would not will
