Culture is composed of nonmaterial culture --- ____2____ abstract creations like values, beliefs, customs and institutional arrangements - and material culture - physical objects like ____3____ cooking pots, computers and bathtubs. In sum, culture reflects both the ideas we share or everything we make. In ordinary ____4____ speech, a person of culture is the individual who can speak another ____5____ language - the person who is unfamiliar with the arts, music, ____6____ literature, philosophy, or history. But to sociologists, to be human is to be cultured, because of culture is the common world ____7____ of experience we share with other members of our group. Culture is essentially to our humanness. It provides a kind ____8____ of map for relating to others. Consider how you find your way about social life. How do you know how to act in a classroom, or a department store, or toward a person who smiles or laughs ____9____ at you? Your culture supplies you by broad, standardized, ____10____ ready-made answers for dealing with each of these situations. Therefore, if we know a person's culture, we can understand and even predict a good deal of his behavior. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
