说明：阅读下面的短文，从短文后所给各项的四个选项(A、B、C、D)中选出能填入相应空白处的最佳选项。 "Thank you" means that you recognize that someone has done something for you. Thus we thank people all day (1) even for the smallest, most (2) things. If a waitress brings you a (3) of coffee, you say "Thank you". When you (4) your food and get your (5), you say "Thank you" to the (6). If someone gives you (7) in the street, you say "Thank you". If someone (8) you to dinner, you say "Yes, thank you, Id (9) to come." However, thats more than (10). Excessive expressions of gratitude (11) Westerners extremely (12) and gives a sense of (13) thanks, a sense of formal or required Kowtowing (叩头) which does not (14) gratitude but insincerity.

For example, if your advisor spends a half-hour of his time (15) you edit some letter youve just written, you will (16) to say "Thank you, I really (17) your time." But one or two phrases of that (18) is enough.

If you go on and on (19) statements about his kindness, the person will feel not thanked but (20) and will not be anxious to help you again.
