Most of us can remember the days when we didn't use e-mail as everyday vehicle for communication . Slowly but surely, it crept into our lives . E-mail is a valuable tool for American college students at any level . It ' s available 24 hours a day , 7 days a week and even at holidays . Most universities assign students an account upon entrance , so there is usually not even an option involved . You can do everything from consulting on homework and projects , keeping in touch with classmates , corresponding with families and friends , and getting daily news services to keep you posted on world events . But what are the disadvantages ? E-mail can be e-jail . You might spend hours writing and responding to e-mails when you should devote yourself in the books for upcoming examination . Or , you might be signed up for so many daily services such as horoscopes , news services , or personals , that your mailbox is so filled up with “ junk mail ” , that finding the important e-mails through your mailbox might take hours . If you are a student , time is at a premium . Create and organize your e-mail folders into important school-related mail , correspondence with friends and family , and a mixed folder for jokes , horoscopes and other news services . Always put the mail into the appropriate folders first , and when you ' re finished , head for the important school-related folder first . Respond to the most important e-mails first and , if you have time , you can get to the others . Discourage your friends from forwarding those tiresome joke lists , sex quizzes , and chain e-mail . The minute you realize you ' ve got one , delete it immediately so you won ' t be tempted to read it . 31 . This passage is most likely to be written for_____ . A . office clerks B . college students C . school teachers D . news editors32 . In the passage , it is implied that most American college students_____ .
