That's why I live in a cabin in the woods. It's miles away from the nearest bypass. It's the perfect place for a retired cabinetmaker. It's relatively quiet except for the buzz of the bees and the occasional cadence of horses galloping in the distance. Nobody comes to visit me, although a mouse did burrow into my cabin once. You can't even get a cab here. The isolation has left me with plenty of time for hobbies. I've ever had time to sculpt a bust of my father and to burnish it. I don't need to travel very far. The furthest I need to go is through the trees and bushes to collect a bundle of firewood and a bunch of fruit. I do wish

I had some animals. Perhaps a cow for milk and some chickens for eggs. It would be interesting to make butter with the milk. The woods are a relative safe place, so calamities are rare. The closest misfortune I came to was the time a burglar broke into my cabin and tried to steal some food. It was late at night. Fortunately, the buzzer of my homemade burglar alarm woke me up. I bumped him on the head with my broom and he went running out the door. I didn't get a clear look at his face because of his black mask. Although I was angry, I didn't call the police. You don't bother the police with these kinds of things in the woods, especially if your burglar is just a raccoon. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
