The Li River is famous for its unique beauty of four characteristics: verdant mountains, crystal-clear water, mysterious caves, and exquisite rocks. The Li River ’ s charm varies with every change of light. At the rainy season, the river is shrouded with mist, the hills look more graceful when covered with such a fine gauze. Depending on the season and level of the water, your boats depart from piers downstream from Guilin and disembark passengers in Yangshuo, a journey of about four hours. The Li River also is a pleasant setting for displays of cormorant fishing. Fishermen on bamboo rafts use strong lights suspended over the water to attract the fish. The cormorants, which are tethered with rings round the base of their necks, catch the fish and then disgorge them for the fishermen."
