They had fallen sick almost immediately and their condition was worsening by the day. Doctors attempted to surgically remove the plastic but the contraction (收缩) of the dolphins ' stomachs in response to the surgical instruments rendered their task impossible. 2.36-meter-high Bao Xishun, a herdsman from Inner Mongolia, positively answered the pleas of aquarium staff in Fushun, Liaoning Province, who realized that the plastic could only be removed by a human hand. Bao was confirmed as the world ' s tallest living human being by the Guinness Book of World Records. An arm of 1.06 meters was just the ticket. A dozen men held down the dolphins and the patients ' upper jaws were tied with towels so they could not bite Bao ' s giant arm. Bao reached his hand into the stomach of each dolphin and pulled out the plastic pieces. It is still not known how the plastic pieces, used as danger-preventing facilities around the outside of the pool, fell into water to be eaten by the dolphins. “ Some very small plastic pieces are still left in the dolphins ' stomachs, ” said Zhu Xiaoling, a local doctor. “ However, the dolphins will be able to digest them and are expected to recover soon. ” Having been living in an area of pasture near Chifeng City since his childhood, Bao, the 54-year-old, has grown to his remarkable height naturally, not as a result of a medical condition. His growth was relatively normal until the age of 16, when an inexplicable growth spurt (突增) saw him reach his record height in just seven years.
