Whether or not we put the before most depends on several things. Both Wongs example sentences above are examples of superlatives. With superlatives, it is usually safest is to put the before the superlative, but it is sometimes possible to not do this, when there isnt a noun being defined. So it is possible to say, Venice: the most beautiful city in Europe? I am tallest in my office. But if the noun man follows the superlative you have to say I am the tallest man in my office. However, there is one main exception. We dont say the when we are comparing the way one thing is at different times, rather than comparing two things. So, This town is most beautiful in Spring. Li and William also discuss rules about using most when we arent creating superlatives. When we are using most as an adverb we can choose whether to use the or not. So, you can say Which writer do you like most? Or Which writer do you like the most? When we are using most to mean the majority of we dont use the, so: Most Chinese people like tea Lastly, in old-fashioned, formal English, most is used on its own to mean very. I was most upset after he left. Who is William and Lis special guest? Dont forget you can get a better idea of how to use most by listening to the programme and downloading the script. If you have a question about the English language, send us an email to questions.chinaelt@bbc.co.uk.
