The Open University in Britain 1 In 1963 the leader of the Labour Party made a speech explaining plans for a “ university of the air ” -an educational system which would make use of television , radio and correspondence courses. Many people laughed at the idea , but it became part of the Labour Party s programme to give educational opportunity to those people who , for one reason or another , had not had a chance to receive further education. 2 By 1969 plans were well advanced and by August 1970 the Open University , as it is now called , had received 400 , 000 applications. Only 25 , 000 could be accepted for the four “ foundation ” courses offered : social sciences , arts , science and mathematics. Unsuccessful candidates were told to apply again the following year , when a foundation course in technology would also be offered. 3 The first teaching programmes appeared on the air and screen in January 1971 , with clerks , farm workers , housewives , teachers , policemen and many others as students. Correspondence units had been carefully prepared and science students were given devices for a small home laboratory. Study centers have been set up all over the country so that students can attend once a week , and once a year they will spend a week at one of the university s summer schools. 4 It has been nearly 30 years since the Open University started to offer courses. Now it is a very important part of the British educational system. Not only does it offer foundation courses like those mentioned above , it also carries out very advanced scientific researches , some of which lead to Master s or PH.D Degrees. Many other countries have started similar educational programmes following the successful example of the Open University in Britain. 1. Paragraph 2_____. 2. Paragraph 3_____. 3. Paragraph 4_____.
