dear friends I attended the oral English test for IELTS this afternoon, the examiner has asked me quite a lot of things such as job, cooking, changes, living standards, happiness, computers, consumerism, advertisements. I believe that our conversation has involved in at least seven aspects of human life. I felt I was totally overwhelmed by the incessant questions from the examiner at the end. It was so terrible that I was even unable to give a complete idea on the last few questions, I totally lost in speaking subconsciously. I believe the examiner has no hostility to me, even though he does appear offensive for one or two minutes. But I think it just means I should practice English a lot more, especially the spoken English. It was totally a terrible experience to me, I even felt the tears flushing in my eyes when I stepped out of the test room. But it is just telling where I have already lagged behind, I should try some way to make it up. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
