He said some provinces were still building or planning to build new plants. Industry officials said that about half of the country ' s 80 million tons of annual soy-crushing capacity was not operating last year, and added that the situation is unlikely to improve this year.采集者退散 In 2007, only 44 percent of capacity was in operation, and many of the closures were plants with a daily capacity below 1,000 tons, according to the report. The Chinese government encouraged a restructuring of the industry to form some big companies that would have better logistics and port facilities, Liu Xiaonan, a commission official, said at a soy conference last month. Liu said the government was encouraging soy plants to sign long-term contracts to ensure supplies because China relies heavily on imports. 100Test 下载频道开通，各类考试题目直接下载。详细请访问 www.100test.com
