One morning you wave goodbye, and that evening you ' re burning the late-night oil in sympathy. In the race to improve educational standards, are throwing the books at kids. elementary school students are complaining of homework. What ' s a well-meaning parent to do? As hard as may be, sit back and chill, experts advise. Though you ' ve got to get them to do it, helping too much, or even examining too carefully, you may keep them doing it by themselves. " I wouldn ' t advise a parent to check every assignment, " says psychologist John Rosemond, author of Ending the Tough Homework. " There ' s a of appreciation for trial and error. Let your children the grade they deserve. " Many experts believe parents should gently look over the work of younger children and ask them to rethink their. But " you don ' t want them to feel it has to be, " she says. That ' s not to say parents should homework first, they should monitor how much homework their kids. Thirty minutes a day in the early elementary years and an hour in four, five, and six is standard, says Rosemond. For junior-high students it should be " more than an hour and a half, " and two for high-school students. If your child has more homework than this, you may want to check other parents and then talk to the teacher about assignment. 71.A.very B. exactC.
