Once a peasant lost his horse and he went to town to buy another. Among the horses on sale he saw his own horse. "This horse is mine," he said to the man standing by the horse. "Someone stole it from me three days ago." "How can that be?" the man said. "It has been mine for three years."

"Three years?" said the peasant. "Are you sure?" Then he quickly covered both eyes of the horse with his hands and asked: "Which eye is he blind in?" "The left eye," said the man.来源：考试大的美女编辑们 The peasant uncovered the horse's left eye and people saw it was clear and shining. "Oh, I made a mistake," said the man. "I meant to say the right eye." "It's not blind in either eye," said the peasant, uncovering the other eye. Then he said to the people around: "It's clear this man is a thief."

The thief tried to run away, but the people caught him. They took him to the judge, and the peasant got his horse back.
