Should Parents Send their Kids to Art Classes? Nowadays, there are an increasing number of parents who prefer to send their kids to attend various kinds of art classes, which has aroused bitter controversy among the public. Some individuals maintain that attending classes is aimed to broaden their kids' horizon and enrich their knowledge in that the kids can get acquainted with peers from different family background. In the class, exposed to a big family they will learn how to cooperate with each other and how to develop a harmonious relationship with his/her classmates, which is absolutely essential when children grow up.

There are some people who hold different opinions. They argue that because some kids put in a large amount of time in the class, they even can't set aside time to stay together with their parents and share their feeling, good or bad, with their family members. As far as I am concerned, just as every coin has two sides, it is true to the phenomenon discussed above. If children can display their potential and they are interested in what they are doing, then parents are expected to provide the children a chance to give a full play of their ability. But if they are disgusted at the class, parents are supposed to support their kids to be engaged in other activities.
