If Mr Sarkozy wanted to seek re-election it was "his business and not hers", Miss Bruni said in a TV interview. She told viewers: "As his wife, one mandate is enough. If he wants to stand, that ' s his business. We never talk about it because I don ' t think I should get involved in that kind of thing. "It ' s all very complicated, and it ' s his job. It would be like him sticking his nose in and suggesting I write a song in a major or minor key, when that ' s my business." Miss Bruni, speaking from her Paris apartment, told the TF1 television presenter Thierry Demaiziere: "My husband can do anything, because he puts his all into everything he does, and that ' s how you succeed in life. "He gives everything he has in his work and his love life, and that is amazing for a woman and amazing for a nation. "So, really I ' m just content that the French have him as president at all. "He is a complete and well-rounded person, and that ' s obvious the second he walks into a room. "I think if he was a carpenter, he ' d be the best carpenter. Giving everything is how one succeeds in professional and private life." The 41-year-old former supermodel, who married Mr Sarkozy in February 2008 after a three-month whirlwind romance, also spoke of how happy they were as a couple. She added: "Our life has changed. I have calmed our lives. Our private life is very gentle, very calm and very tranquil. "I ' m better with him than alone, and that ' s something I could never have imagined saying when I was young." The Italian-born singer also answered criticism that a recent poll found 51 per cent of the French felt she was "remote" from the people. She said: "I feel close to the French. perhaps they don ' t feel close because of all the photographs that look so staged. They don ' t see me as I really am. 100Test 下载频道开通 , 各类考试题目 直接下载。 详细请访问 www.100test.com
