Quite a lot of parents have done almost everything for their children for the sake of love. 第一段结束：Recently the issue of how should parents help children to be independent has been in the limelight and has aroused wide concern in the public. The only child policy has brought a lot of pressure for both parents and children during the past decades. Quite a lot of parents have done almost everything for their children for the sake of love. 第二段说后果：It is difficult for these kids to develop and cultivate their character and to be independent with their parent ' s so-called love. 再加一句 : They can not survive the future fierce competition owing to the lack of independence. 第二段结束 : It is difficult for these kids to develop and cultivate their character and to be independent with their parent ' s so-called love. They can not survive the future fierce competition owing to the lack of independence. 第三段说如何做 : A number of solutions can be found for parents to help children to be independent, with the following ones being foremost. Firstly , parents should offer their children more opportunities to come into frequent contact with the society and form their own picture about this world. Secondly, playing and communicating with their peers should be favored by their parents because these activities can develop children ' s interpersonal skills, which may put them in a favorable position in the future job markets. What ' s more, financial burden, psychological burden and even moderate anxiety can make children more fortitude and mature when confronting the difficulties . 完整的文章可以是这样的 : Recently the issue of how should parents help children to be independent has been in the limelight and has aroused wide concern in the public. The only child policy has brought a lot of pressure for both parents and children during the past decades. Quite a lot of parents have done almost everything for their children for the sake of love. It is difficult for these kids to develop and cultivate their character and to be independent with their parent ' s so-called love. They can not survive the future fierce competition owing to the lack of independence. A number of solutions can be found for parents to help children to be independent, with the following ones being foremost. Firstly, parents should offer their children more opportunities to come into frequent contact with the society and form their own picture about this world. Secondly, playing and communicating with their peers should be favored by their parents because these activities can develop children's interpersonal skills, which may put them in a favorable position in the future job markets. What's more, financial burden, psychological burden and even moderate anxiety can make children more fortitude and mature when confronting the difficulties. Only in this way can our future generation shoulder their responsibility.
