Take a walk along the Chesapeake Bay, and you are likely to see plastic bags floating in the water. Ever since these now ubiquitous (到处存在的) symbols of American super-consumption showed up in the supermarkets, plastic shopping bags have made their _____ (51) into local waterways, and from there, into the bay, where they can _____ (52) wildlife. Piles of them—the _____ (53) takes centuries to decompose (分解) -- show up in landfills and on city streets. Plastic bags also take an environmental toll in the form of millions of barrels of oil expended every year to produce them. Enter Annapolis _____ (54) you will see plastic bags distributed free in department stores and supermarkets. Alderman Sam Shropshire has introduced a well-meaning proposal to ban retailers (零售商) _____ (55) distributing plastic shopping bags in Maryland's capital. Instead, retailers would be required to offer bags _____ (56) recycled paper and to sell reusable bags. The city of Baltimore is considering a similar measure. Opponents of the idea, however, argue that (57) bags are harmful, too: they cost more to make, they consume more _____ (58) to transport, and recycling them causes more pollution than recycling plastic. The argument for depriving Annapolis residents (居民) of their plastic bags is (59) accepted. Everyone in this _____ (60) is right about one thing: disposable shopping bags of any type are _____ (61), and the best outcome would be for customers to reuse bags instead.

Annapolis mayor is investigating how to hand out free, reusable (可以再使用的) shopping bags to city residents, a proposal that can proceed regardless of whether other bags are banned.

A less-expensive _____ (62) would be to encourage retailers to give discounts to customers _____ (63) bring their own, reusable bags, a policy that a spokesman for the supermarket Giant Food says its chain already has in place. And this policy would be more _____ (64) if stores imitated furniture mega-retailer Ikea and charged for disposable bags at the checkout counter. A broad ban on the use of plastic shopping bags, which would merely replace some forms of pollution with others, is not the _____ (65). 51
