DESK PERSON: Do you have a reservation? CAROL: Yes, my name is Carol Jiang. That ' s spelled J - I - A - N - G. DESK PERSON: I ' m sorry, Ma ' am. I can ' t find anything under that name. Do you have your confirmation number? CAROL: No, I don ' t have it with me. But I know I have a reservation. My husband made it for me last month. DESK PERSON: Well, let me look again. How do you spell your first name, Ma ' am? CAROL: C - A - R - O - L. Carol. DESK PERSON: I don ' t find a "Carol" in the computer for today. I have a Carol Larson here. But that reservation is for next Monday. CAROL: No, that ' s not me. My name is Jiang, not Larson. My husband reserved for me. DESK PERSON: Are you sure he used your name, Ma ' am? Maybe he reserved under his name. CAROL: His name is Lin, L - I - N. DESK PERSON: I ' m sorry. I have nothing here. CAROL: Miss, I know he made this reservation for me. DESK PERSON: Hmm. Let me try something. Wait. I have a reservation for someone named "Jang" here. But it ' s spelled J - A - N - G. It ' s not spelled J - I - A - N - G. It ' s for a "Mr. C Jang." CAROL: Oh, that must be me! Probably they typed the name wrong. My husband ' s English isn ' t so good. DESK PERSON: Yes, sometimes it happens, Ma ' am. That ' s why it is always good to carry your confirmation number. I ' m sorry about the inconvenience. CAROL: It ' s okay. It

's probably my husband's fault. Is there a pool in this hotel?

DESK PERSON: Yes, of course. The pool is open until 10:00 p.m. So you still have about 45 minutes. CAROL: Good. DESK PERSON:

Here is your key. Your room is 379. You can find the elevators just around that corner there, down the hall. Enjoy your stay, Ma'am.
